

Guns'll Soon Begin to Bark!

Quail is hollerin' in the woods,
Seems jes' like they know
Folks so busy huskin' corn
Huntin's got to go;
Jes' you wait thar, Mr. Quail,
Jes' keep up yer tootin';
Spen' yer time a crowin' now,
Soon there'll be some shootin'.

Get out your huntin' togs. If you don't happen to be the possessor of an outfit, come and see us—we can supply you with all you'll need at figures that compete with any of the big city houses. We handle all the finer grades of Shot-guns and Rifles and are offering a splendid single-barrel bargain to those who feel they cannot afford a more expensive weapon. You needn't bother about borrowing while we are making such low prices this season. A full line of supplies, consisting of loaded and empty Shells, black and smokeless Powder, Coats, Vests and Leggings.

Come, Let's Get Together On the Gun Question!

PARIS AND LONDON.

Interesting Letter From Miss Molloy, of Germantown, Telling of Her Impressions of These Old World Cities.

Miss Margaret Molloy, of Germantown, writes interestingly of her travels in "Gay Paree" and London. In a letter to her sister she says:

"I wrote you a souvenir postal from every place but this is my first letter. Have written very few letters to Ky. since I left, but many postals. Am having a glorious trip and seeing all the rarest sights of this grand old world. Went to see the palace where Napoleon I lived at Versailles, also saw Josephine's private apartments. Have visited more 'palais royaux,' castles, kings' and queens' tombs than I can think of the rest of my life. Think I have seen all the most interesting points of Paris. Spent a day in the Louvre that claims the most interesting treasures of art in the world. The Louvre with the Tuilleries cover forty-eight acres and form the most magnificent art palaces in Europe. It takes over two hours to walk through the rooms without stopping. Many of the exhibition buildings are still standing, and that part of the city looks like the 'World's Fair.' We went up Eiffel Tower one beautiful bright morning and had a fine view of Paris. The tower is 984 feet high. We have visited all the famous churches, including Notre Dame, the world renowned cathedral of Paris. The magnificent furnishings and architectural grandeur of this ancient structure is beyond description. It was built on the site of an old church of the fourth century, and the present edifice was built seven hundred years ago. We paid a 'franc' and went to the treasury of the church to see the relics—among these were fragments of the Crown of Thorns and a piece of the wood and nail of the Tree Cross.

Everything is very Catholic about Paris, fine churches, ancient tombs, monuments, etc. This is truly a lovely city, where wealth and elegance seem to roll along the clean smooth boulevards, rubber-tired.

The French are a polite and refined people. We have no trouble in being understood—all the waiters and maids at the hotels 'parley vous anglais,' and all the big stores have clerks who speak English. We see a great deal of French style and elegant gowns, but New York holds its own with anything I have seen in Paris, so far as well dressed women are concerned.

Had a very pleasant stay in London a few days, spent a day in Westminster Abbey, visited the famous St. Paul's and Tower of London; saw the Palace of the King and went to the British Museum, that wonderful storehouse of every age of art and sculpture, the most wonderful of all I have ever been in, which I will tell you more about, together with other endless 'fairly tales' on my return to old Kentucky. Would stay all winter and continue to enjoy these 'feasts of vision,' but one of our cousins on account of her health can not stand traveling as I can. Therefore we are booked to sail early in November from Liverpool on the 'Luania.' We go from Paris to London, and on our way to Liverpool will stop at Stratford-on-Avon for a few hours. Ours was a perfect dream of a voyage on the 'Campania' over the ocean, everything like at the Waldorf Astoria. Elegant dining service and menu to suit, but woe to those who eat too much unless they are old travelers. On board there was a real live Lord, a young Irish nobleman who had been traveling in the United States the past year. And ever so many 'lady' 'so and so's' and their children, and the people on deck bobbed around amongst them as if they were 'common.' Quite a number of our relatives and friends came to see us off the day we embarked at New York with best wishes and flowers and we voyaged over at the rate of twenty-five miles per hour. The weather has been almost ideal since our departure last August, and we feel would linger in this grand old world where we have spent many days of pure delight, but the sands of time are running fast.

A lazy liver may be only a tired liver, or a starved liver. A stick is all right for the back of a lazy man. But it would be a savage as well as a stupid thing to beat a weary man or a starving man because he lagged in his work. So in treating the lagging liver it is a great mistake to lash it with drastic drugs. In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred a torpid or sluggish liver is but a symptom of an ill-nourished body, whose organs are weary with overwork. Let your liver alone. Start with the stomach and its allied organs of digestion and nutrition. Put them in proper working order, and see how quickly your liver will become active and energetic. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has made many marvelous cures of 'liver trouble' by its wonderful control of the organs of digestion and nutrition. It restores the normal activity of the stomach, increases the secretions of the blood making glands, cleanses the system from the poisonous accumulations, and so relieves the liver of the burdens imposed upon it by the defection of other organs.
